<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What has this got to do with botany? Very little but everything to do with the quest for understanding and knowledge of our land • Seeks to set the record straight regarding the contributions made by the French and English expeditions of 1801-1803 to map the missing sections of the Australian coastline. • French captained by Nicolas Boudin, and English by Matthew Flinders. • The expeditions were undertaken at a time when the two countries were in conflict but these two men rose above the rivalries of war in a spirit of cooperation. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A surprising and delightful book, beautifully designed. • There are chapters on: e.g. a Monastery Garden, a Pilgrim's Garden, and a Cook's Garden, etc. • And each contains general information, specific information on e.g. plants, individuals or gardens then finishes with a garden design. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Superb paintings and drawings of groups of birds, e.g. Rainforest Birds and Desert Birds. • Also includes information on his artistic approach and techniques.
